THIS brochure has been compiled and prepared under the direction of Major Orlando H. Petty, National Commander, for the years 1926-1927, and is published for the information and guidance of all who may be interested and concerned. It is hoped that it may be helpful in giving useful information on a most important result of some of the activities of the United States Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

DR. ORLANDO H. PETTY (M of H) D. S. C.
Commander 1926-1927

DR. PETTY, a well-known physician of Philadelphia with offices at 1803 Pine St., is an Ohio man, native of Cadiz and graduate of Franklin College in 1898, and of Jefferson Medical in 1904. After graduation he located in Philadelphia going to St. Timothy's Hospital, Roxborough, as resident physician and later becoming Assistant Pathologist at the same Hospital. In 1906 he became Assistant to Dr. J. C. DaCosta, Jr., in Jefferson Medical College and has taught Internal Medicine there since that time. He is also Pathologist and Director of Laboratories at Germantown Hospital and physician to the Roxborough Memorial Hospital. He is physician in charge of Metabolism in Philadelphia General Hospital and was only last December appointed by Provost Penniman to the faculty of the Graduate School of Medicine of the University of Pennsylvania, taking the position of Professor of Diseases of Metabolism. He has written many important papers on clinical medicine and is regarded as an authority on diabetes and the insulin treatment. He is a member of the Pennsylvania Society, Sons of the Revolution; of the Aesculapian and Manufacturers' Clubs, a fellow of the College of Physicians of Philadelphia and of the American College of Physicians.

Dr. Petty has a distinguished war record making it quite appropriate that he should be called upon to deliver the address at the burial of the unknown soldier. He is one of comparatively few to receive the Congressional Medal of Honor which was conferred upon him by special act of Congress for "conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity above and beyond the call of duty in action," while serving with the Fifth Marines, June 11, 1918, Bois de Belleau, France. The Citation is as follows:

"While under heavy fire of high explosive and gas shells in the town of Lucy, Lorraine, where his dressing station was located, he attended to and evacuated the wounded under most trying conditions. Having been knocked to the ground by an exploding shell, which tore his mask, he discarded the mask and courageously continued his work. His dressing station being hit and demolished he personally helped to carry Captain Williams, wounded, through shell fire to a place of safety."

Adjutant and Quartermaster Legion of Valor, 1927.

SEVERAL years ago, all of the records of the old Medal of Honor Legion and the Legion of Valor were lost, and it was necessary in the preparation of this brochure that we call on many of the older members of the order for information. From October 6, 1926 up to July 30, 1927, more than 7500 pieces of mail were sent out by this office. We have mailed printed matter to more than 1500 prospective members.

One hundred and five new members have been added to the rolls during that time and 20 old members reinstated.

We have lost on account of death, 9 Civil War Veterans, 2 Spanish-American War Veterans and 2 Indian War Veterans.

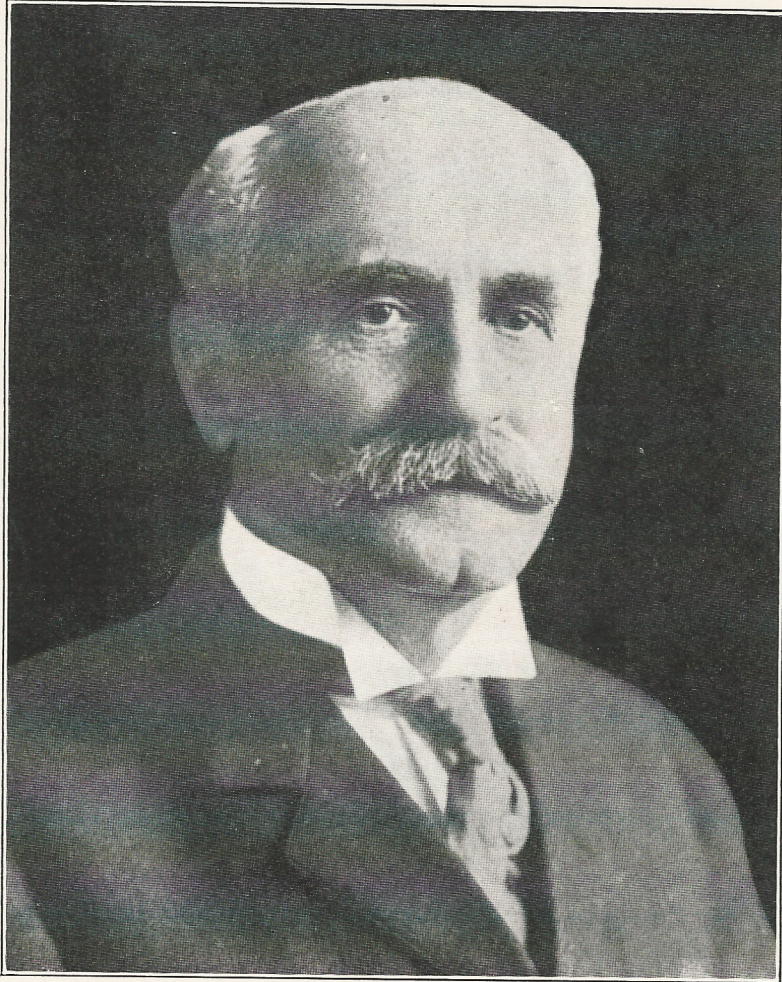

The Army and Navy Congressional Medals of Honor and the Distinguished Service Cross that appear on the cover page of this brochure are the same as appear on the first class certificates of membership. These certificates are 17 by 22 inches and recognized as one of the finest engraved certificates on the market. With the engrossing of the member's name they cost the Legion of Valor, $5.00.

The work of the Adjutant during the past nine months has been made very pleasant by the fine support given him by the Commander and the Chairman of the Executive committee and the many letters received from the members of our order.

So we feel highly honored in having served as the Adjutant and Quartermaster of such a Distinguished order.

Your Historian, Frank L. Anders and your Adjutant appreciate the assistance given by the older members of the order in compiling these records.

BEN PRAGER, Adjutant.

COLONEL JAMES M. SCHOONMAKER
Medal of Honor (Civil War) Commander
1925-1926

COMPANION J. M. Schoonmaker, a Pittsburgh boy eighteen years of age, enlisted at the outbreak of the Civil War as a Private in Captain Patterson's Union Cavalry of Pittsburgh in May, 1861, and served thirteen months through all the grades of enlistment from Private to Sergeant-Major of the First Maryland Cavalry, to which his Company was assigned, and in August, 1862, was commissioned Second Lieutenant of Company A of that Regiment; shortly thereafter, he was ordered to report in person to Secretary of War Staunton and by him referred to Andrew G. Curtin, Governor of Pennsylvania, who commissioned him Colonel of the Fourteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry, a new Regiment then organizing in Pittsburgh, and has the honor of being the youngest officer of his rank in the Federal Army, being but twenty years and four months old at that time. He commanded that Regiment until January 1st, 1864, when he was promoted and assigned to the command of the First Brigade of General W. W. Averill's Division of the Army of the Shenandoah and continued in that office until the Regiment was mustered out of service June 30th, 1865, at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. He was in active service from beginning to end of the War and after Lee's surrender was assigned to the command of all the troops necessary to drive the Indians back to their reservations on the Western Plains from which all troops were withdrawn to take part in the War; he also led the cavalry charge on Star Fort at Winchester, Va. on September 19th, 1864, which resulted in the winning of that battle and for which service he was awarded a Congressional Medal of Honor.

BRIGADIER GENERAL EDWARD S. GODFREY
U. S. A. (Retired)

Commander, Legion of Valor, 1923-1925

Awarded Medal of Honor, September 30, 1877, at Bear Paw Mountain, Montana. General Godfrey, then Captain 7th, U. S. Cavalry, led his command into action when he was severely wounded.

General Godfrey was Chairman of the National Committee, in charge of the Commemoration exercises of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Custer Battle, National Custer Association, June 24-25-26, 1926.

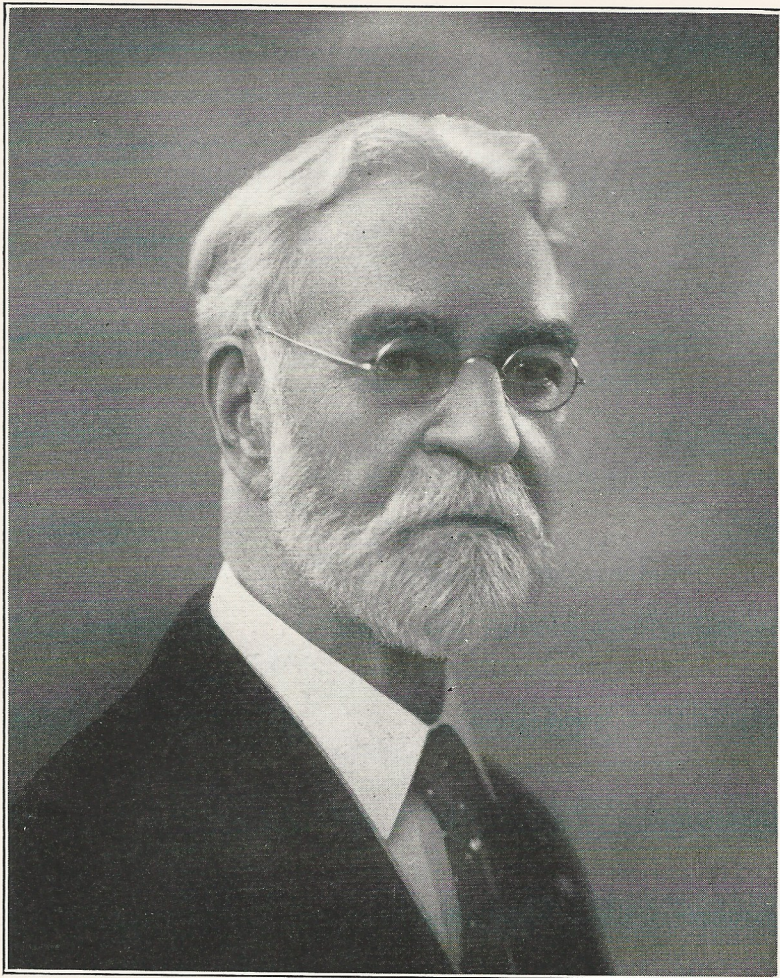

Troop K, 7th U. S. Cavalry during the Custer Massacre, June 1876.

LIEUTENANT JOHN McCLOY
Commander, Legion of Valor, 1922-1923

Medal of Honor, China, 1900.
Medal of Honor Vera Cruz, 1914.
Navy Cross—World War, 1918.

Enlisted March 7, 1898. Served on U. S. S. Columbia in West Indian Waters during the war with Spain. Served in the Philippines, 1899 to 1902. China Boxer uprising 1900. Vera Cruz, 1914. In Command of U. S. S. Ontario from December 22, 1917, to January 17, 1918. Commanding officer of the U. S. S. Curlew, a mine sweeper in the difficult and hazardous duty of sweeping for and removing mines of the North Sea barrage. Wounded in China and Vera Cruz. His letters of recommendations from his superior officers are so many that it would require many pages of this book to set them forth. Lieutenant McCloy is still in the service.

CAPTAIN GEORGE W. BRUSH, M. D.

Commander, Legion of Valor, 1900-1919-1920

Awarded Medal of Honor, May 24, 1864. Captain Brush, then Lieutenant 34th U.S.C.T. at Ashepoo River, S.C. Voluntarily commanded a boat crew, which went to the rescue of a large number of Union soldiers on board the stranded steamer, Boston, and with great gallantry succeeded in conveying them to shore, being exposed during the entire time to a heavy fire from a Confederate battery.

Served as Chairman of the Executive Committee several years. A power of strength to the Legion of Valor.

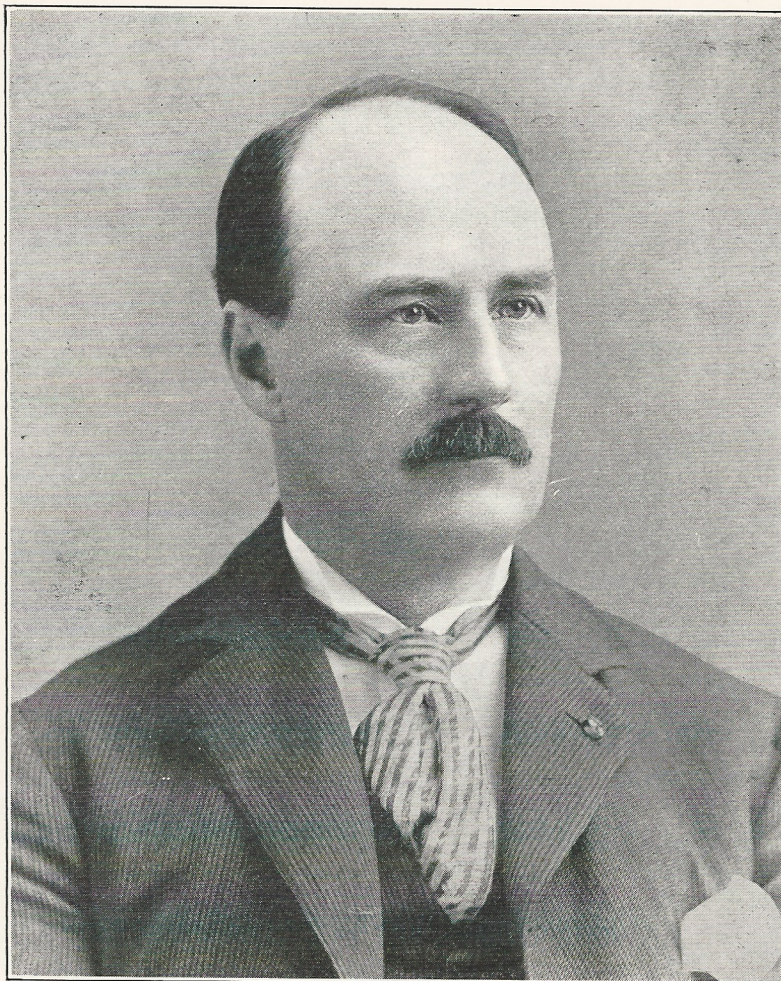

CAPTAIN ORVILLE T. CHAMBERLAIN

Commander, Legion of Valor, 1916-1918

Captain Chamberlain, then 2nd Lieutenant, Company G, 74th, Indiana Infantry at Chicamauga, Georgia, September 20, 1863. While exposed to a galling fire went in search of another Regiment, found its location, procured ammunition from the men thereof, and returned with the ammunition to his own command. Admitted to Indiana Bar 1866. First City Attorney of Elkhart, Indiana. Served as District Attorney 34th, Jud. Dis. Div. Com. 10th, Fis. of Indiana. G. A. R. Member of the Loyal Legion. Author of Act of Congress, approved 27th of April 1916, granting special pensions to soldiers and Sailors of the Army and Navy who were awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Captain Chamberlain spent a great deal of his own money and gave much of his time for many years to increase the influence of the order.

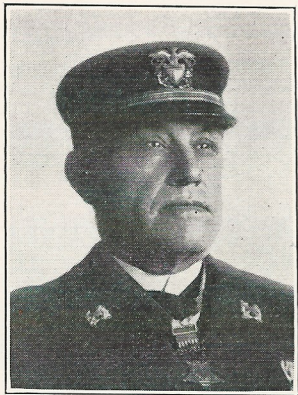

HONORABLE WILLIAM D. DICKEY

Commander, Army and Navy Medal of Honor Legion, 1913-1915

Awarded Medal of Honor, June 17, 1864. Colonel Dickey, then Captain, Battery M. 15th, N.Y. Heavy Artillery. Refused to leave the field, remaining in command, after being wounded by a piece of shell, and led his command in the assault on the enemy's works on the following day.

Colonel Dickey was destined for a leader in any walk of life, and to crown his career he was elected to the Supreme Court of the State of New York where he served with marked distinction for seventeen years. He loved this Legion and was ever ready to respond to its needs in an emergency.

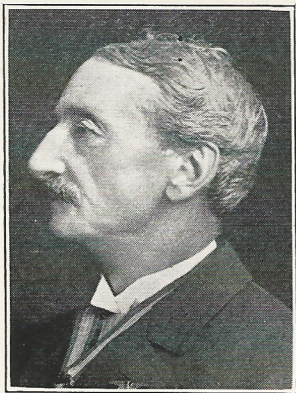

Colonel Dickey was born January 11, 1845, and died May 17, 1924, at the age of 79.

GENERAL ORDERS, }
No. 12 }

WAR DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, May 16, 1925.

The following is published to the Army for the information of all concerned:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, May 16, 1925.

ORDERS:

The Secretary of War announces with deep regret the death of Lieutenant General NELSON A. MILES, United States Army, retired, which occurred at Washington, D. C., on the 15th instant.

Lieutenant General MILES served as a captain in the 22d Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry from September 9, 1861, to May 31, 1862, and as lieutenant colonel and colonel, 61st New York Volunteer Infantry, from the latter date until appointed Brigadier General of Volunteers May 12, 1864, for distinguished service in the battles of the Old Wilderness and Spottsylvania Court House, Virginia. He was advanced to the grade of Major General of Volunteers October 21, 1865, and was honorably mustered out of service September 1, 1866. He accepted an appointment as colonel in the Infantry arm of the Regular Army September 6, 1866; was advanced to the grade of Brigadier General in December, 1880; to that of Major General in April, 1890; to that of Lieutenant General in June, 1900, and was retired from active service August 8, 1903, by operation of law, having reached the age of compulsory retirement on that date.

The brevet of Major General of Volunteers was awarded to him August 25, 1864, for highly meritorious and distinguished conduct, and particularly for gallantry and valuable services in the Battle of Ream's Station, Virginia; also the brevets of Brigadier General and Major General, United States Army, for gallant and meritorious services in the battles of Chancellorsville and Spottsylvania, Virginia. He received the Congressional Medal of Honor for distinguished gallantry in the Battle of Chancellorsville, Virginia, May 3, 1863, while holding with his command a line of abatis and rifle pits against a strong force of the enemy until he was severely wounded.

After entering the Regular Army, General MILES served in a number of Indian campaigns in which he was markedly successful; and as a general officer he commanded at different times the Departments of the Columbia, the Missouri, Arizona, and the East, and the Divisions of the Pacific and of the Missouri. He commanded the entire Army from October 5, 1895, to the date of his retirement in 1903; and in 1898 he commanded the expedition to, and the United States forces in, Porto Rico, in the War with Spain.

In the passing of General MILES the country loses one of the most heroic figures of the Civil War, as well as one of the most potent instrumentalities in the pacification of the western frontier. As a subordinate commander he received the commendations of his superiors for his brilliant, able, and gallant conduct in the many engagements of the Civil War, in which he was wounded several times, and in the Indian campaigns which followed that war. As a superior commander in later life, he exhibited those qualities which marked him as a soldier of the highest type.

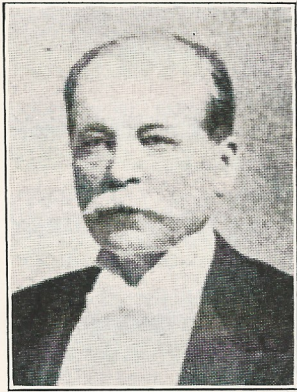

DWIGHT F. DAVIS,
Acting Secretary of War.

J. L. HINES,
*Major General,
Chief of Staff.*

OFFICIAL:

INTRODUCTION

THE people of the United States inherited a peculiar feeling in relation to titles and decorations for service that seems to be at variance with the history of the human race as we know it. This feeling must have been very acute in the early history of the Republic, for we find it reflected in the constitution of our country and in many early papers of our statesmen. That attitude of mind is not hard to understand by those who have given close and intensive study of the times when decorations and titles were synonymous with power and oppression of the masses by the classes, and that was to a certain extent so fostered by the bestowal of titles and decorations.

However, the decorations that our government has seen fit to bestow through the acts of its legislative bodies do not create a titled class nor one endowed with power to wield. These decorations have been bestowed by a grateful Republic to those who valued the liberty of all the people greater than life itself, and through their acts have given proof that they were willing to make the supreme sacrifice that the Republic might not "Perish from the earth".

It must not be understood that those who have been so decorated have been the only ones who have performed deeds of valor. The names of thousands of men, yes more than that, are written on the rolls of the Army and Navy who have performed similar deeds, but unfortunately their acts have been unobserved and we know of them only through the final results achieved. Only those have been decorated whose deeds were observed by impartial and disinterested witnesses who saw the deed performed.

This organization stands uncovered and in respectful silence before the unseen monument and the unwritten archives that commemorate the deeds of those who have, with no one but God as their witness performed those deeds that have insured the continued existence of our noble inheritance.

FRANK LA FAYETTE ANDERS,
National Historian.

AN ADDRESS

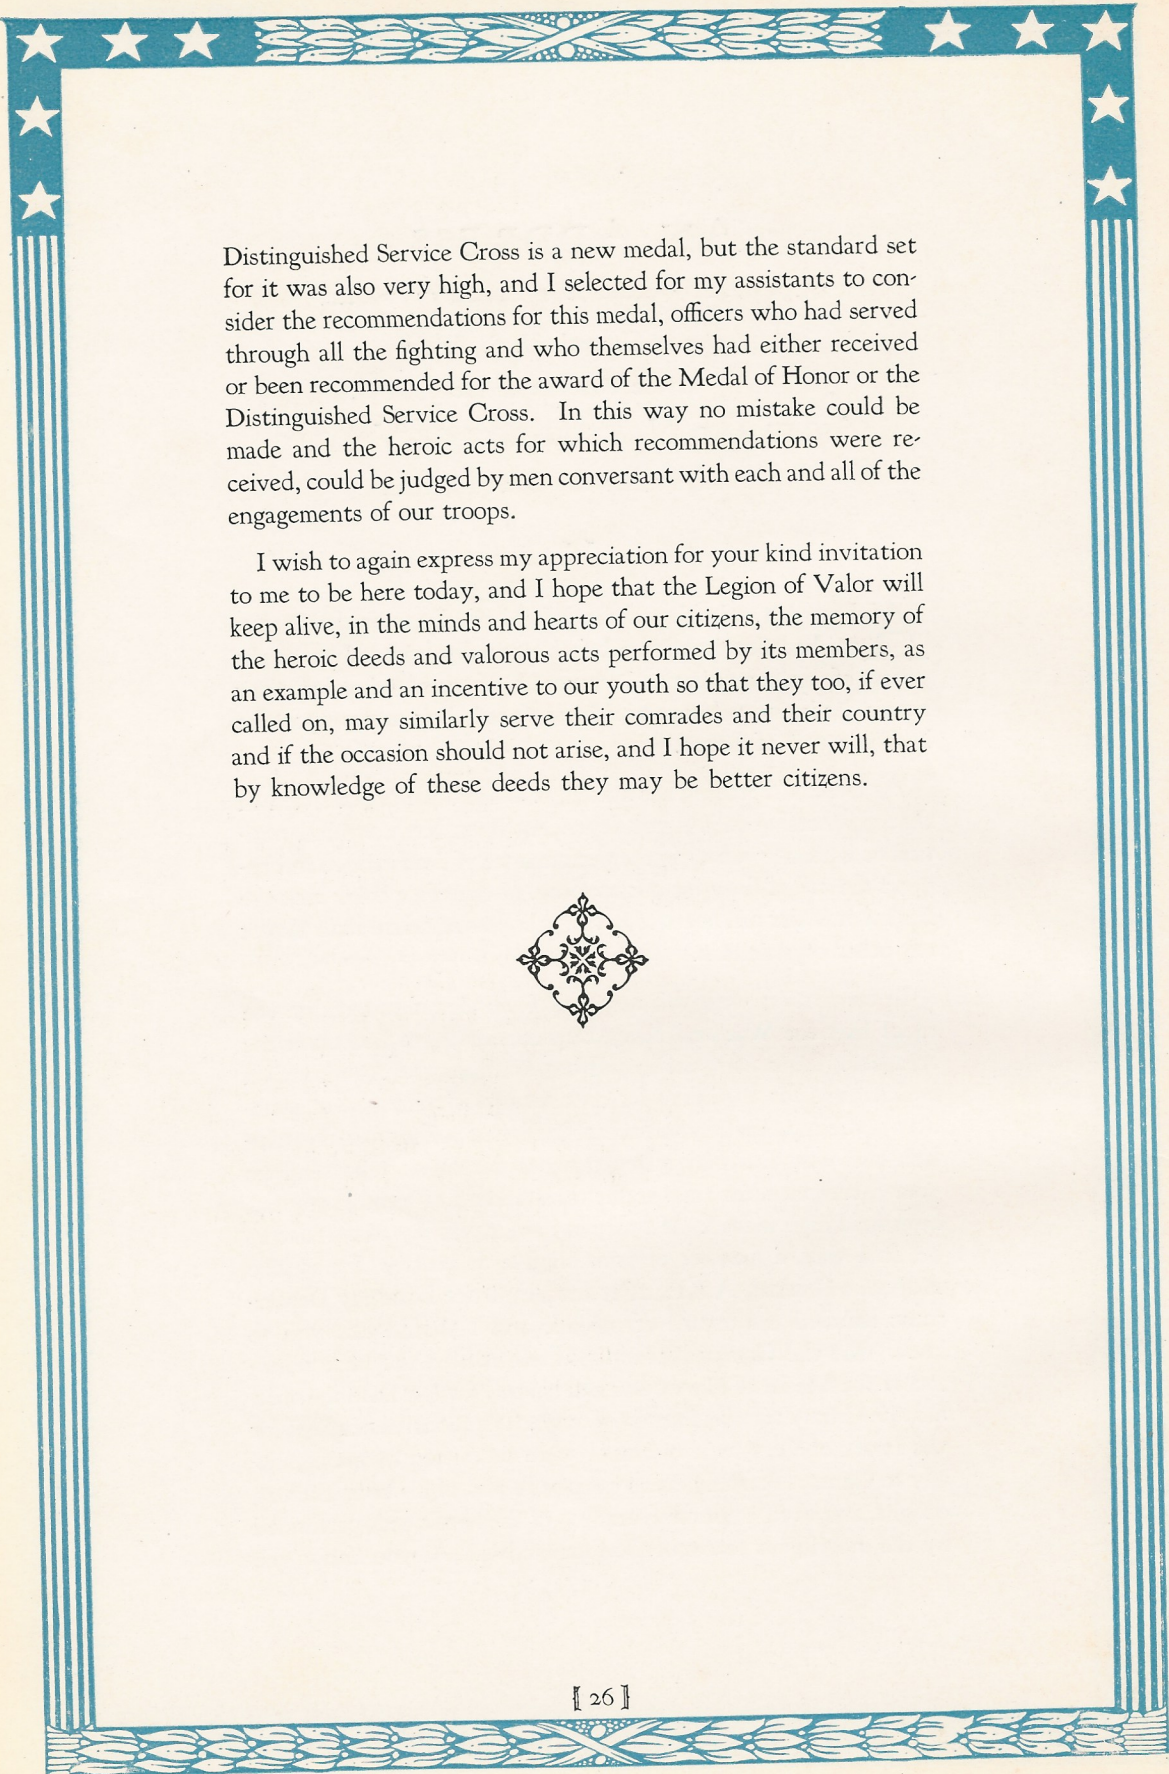

By MAJOR-GENERAL ROBERT C. DAVIS
Adjutant-General, U. S. Army

at the Banquet of the
ARMY AND NAVY LEGION OF VALOR
Washington, D. C., Oct. 3rd, 1922

AS I am not a holder of the Medal of Honor or the Distinguished Service Cross I feel especially honored to be the guest of an organization composed of men who by their heroic deeds and valorous acts have placed their names upon the Nation's roll of honor.

As General Pershing has stated, it is a unique organization in that membership in it is not dependent upon birth, wealth, position or influence but upon the performance of deeds above and beyond the call of duty for our country. I therefore think that the Legion of Valor can boast of having a higher standard than almost any other organization.

In connection with this standard I wonder if you realize the effect that the War and Navy Departments have had upon the standard. In most societies and organizations the committee on nominations for eligibility for membership is composed of members of the organization and controlled by it, but in your organization the War and Navy Departments determine who shall be your future members, and so far the standard of membership has been held high indeed. If I may say so, it was my misfortune to be, in a way, a member of your eligible committee, for as The Adjutant General, A.E.F., after the Armistice I and my Department handled the award of medals, and I should like you to know that the Commander-in-Chief maintained the high standard of the Medal of Honor and established for the Distinguished Service Cross a standard almost as high. The recommendations for the award of the Medal of Honor were submitted by me personally to General Pershing, and I can assure you of his keen interest, delight, and even emotion in reading of the heroic acts performed by the individuals recommended for medals. As you know, the Distinguished Service Cross is a new medal, but the standard set for it was also very high, and I selected for my assistants to consider the recommendations for this medal, officers who had served through all the fighting and who themselves had either received or been recommended for the award of the Medal of Honor or the Distinguished Service Cross. In this way no mistake could be made and the heroic acts for which recommendations were received, could be judged by men conversant with each and all of the engagements of our troops.

I wish to again express my appreciation for your kind invitation to me to be here today, and I hope that the Legion of Valor will keep alive, in the minds and hearts of our citizens, the memory of the heroic deeds and valorous acts performed by its members, as an example and an incentive to our youth so that they too, if ever called on, may similarly serve their comrades and their country and if the occasion should not arise, and I hope it never will, that by knowledge of these deeds they may be better citizens.

The following paper was read by Companion Brush at the reunion of the Army and Navy Legion of Valor held at Washington, D.C., in 1921. It gives some very important and essential information upon Army and Navy decorations for extraordinary acts in conflict with an armed enemy of the United States, and it is felt that this paper should be embodied in full.

Medals for Gallantry and Distinguished Service and the Rule Governing Their Award

By

PAST COMMANDER, GEORGE W. BRUSH
Congressional Medal of Honor

IT is not the purpose of this brief paper to go into an extended history of the medals of the United States Army, Navy and Marine Corps. For a complete history of these and others, you are referred to a recently issued book entitled "Orders, Decorations and Insignia, Military and Civil", by Colonel Robert E. Wyllie, G.P. Putnam Sons, with an introductory notice by General P. C. Marsh, Chief of Staff, United States Army, 1921. Many of the facts herein presented are culled from that book; also to an illustrated article in the National Geographic Magazine December 1919—by same author.

Prior to the Civil War our Army and Navy had no official medal for heroism, valor or distinguished service. Special medals had been issued from time to time voted by Congress to Individuals; the first of these to General George Washington in 1776; also to Captain Paul Jones after his famous fight with the Serapis in 1779 and to the three men who captured Major Andre whose names were Paulding, Williams, and Van Wart in 1780. Several were issued in the War of 1812, Generals Scott and Taylor were presented with gold medals for services in the Mexican War and General Grant was presented with a similar medal after his victory at Chattanooga. None of these medals were intended to be worn.

Aside from the Certificate of Merit established in 1847, and abolished by Congress in July, 1918, the rank and file, up to 1861, received no recognition for exceptional service from the government. During the Revolutionary War there was, however, established what was known as the "purple heart" by order of General Washington "for any singularly meritorious action performed by the soldier without regard to rank." It consisted of the figure of a heart in purple cloth or silk edged with narrow lace or binding to be worn on the left breast. "The road to glory in a patriot army was thus thrown open to all." There is now no data available to tell just how many men received the "purple heart" nor for how long the decoration existed; apparently it has never been abolished by order, but merely fell into disuse and oblivion. See page 9 of Colonel Wyllie's book, before noticed.

The Medal of Honor was established by act of Congress in 1861 and was the only medal that existed in our Army and Navy for heroism or distinguished gallantry up to the time of the World War.

In nearly all the countries which are included under the expression "Great Powers" decorations for distinguished service rendered the state take precedence over those awarded for acts of valor, on the theory that the services of statesmen, generals and other public men who command armies, plan campaigns and are high in the councils of the nation are of more importance and therefore deserve higher rewards than do individual acts of gallantry on the battlefield. The exceptions to this rule are Great Britain and the United States, in both of which countries the primary valor decoration takes precedence of all others and it is worthy of note that the standard set for the award of these two medals are not only higher than other countries, but they are also more rigorously applied.

The Congressional Medal of Honor of the United States and the Victoria Cross of England, therefore, rank the highest of any military decorations in the world.

Some misunderstandings have arisen from time to time as to the various decorations issued by the War and Navy Department and some medals were issued in the sixties and later not strictly in accordance with the law. By Section 122 of the Act of June 2, 1916, Congress authorized the appointment of a board of officers on the retired list of the Army to revise the list so far as the Army was concerned and eliminate all those which they found had been illegally issued. By this action 911 of the Medals of Honor issued up to that time were stricken from the list. 838 of these were those illegally issued to the Twenty-seventh Maine Regiment, January 24, 1865.

Revised figures excluding the above show a grand total of 1853 medals issued up to November 11, 1919. Eighty of these were issued to the World War men, fifty-six to the living and twenty-four were issued posthumously. The whole number of the Medals of Honor issued in the World War up to the expiration of the time limit fixed by the War Department is 105. Ninety-five in the Army and ten in the Navy.

In June, 1897, the rules governing the award of the Medal of Honor were defined in part as follows: "In order that the Congressional Medal of Honor may be deserved, service must be performed in action of such a conspicuous character as to clearly distinguish the man for gallantry and intrepidity above his Comrades; service that involves extreme jeopardy of life." Again, in July, 1919, the following amendment to the rules was promulgated: "The president is authorized to present in the name of Congress a Medal of Honor only to each person who, while an officer or enlisted man of the Army shall hereafter, in action involving actual conflict with an enemy, distinguish himself conspicuously by gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty." This is the only medal presented in the name of Congress, hence the frequent allusion to it as a Congressional Medal of Honor. This Medal cannot be issued to a civilian. While the conditions governing the award of the Navy Medal of Honor are governed by different acts of Congress, the rules adopted for its award are now identical with those of the Army. Two Medals of Honor are not awarded to the same person but in lieu thereof an oak leaf cluster is given to be worn on the ribbon.

The Army Medal had been so nearly copied by the Grand Army of the Republic that in 1904 the present design was adopted, and in 1919 the Navy adopted a new design, a medal with data similar to that engraved on the Army medal; the ribbon and button of both Army and Navy medals are identical. Under the new rules medals of honor are worn at the neck only. Originally it was worn on the breast but when other medals were authorized it was decided to give it a place of honor. Those in civil life (former soldiers) should wear it with the ribbon under the collar of the coat, the medal dependent at the neck about one inch below the neck tie. Prior to the World War, 624 Medals of Honor were issued by the Navy Department; 102 were issued during the World War. How many have been issued since the speaker does not know. The medals should be worn ONLY by the one to whom it is awarded; at his decease it becomes an heirloom.

The Distinguished Service Medal was established by executive order in January, 1918, and confirmed by Congress the following July. It can be awarded to "any person who while serving in any capacity with the Army of the United States, shall distinguish himself or herself by specially meritorious service to the Government in a duty of great responsibility. The D.S.M. of the Navy is awarded under exactly the same conditions as that of the Army. This medal ranks next to the Medal of Honor for reasons before given.

The Distinguished Service Cross of the Army was instituted at the same time as the Distinguished Service Medal and is to reward individual "acts of extraordinary heroism in connection with military operation against an armed enemy not warranting the award of the Medal of Honor." The Navy also has a Service Cross. "The difference between this and the Distinguished Service Cross of the Army should be noted. The Army decoration is given only for heroism in war, while the Navy Cross is much broader in scope and in addition to heroism it includes any other distinguished service, not only in time of war but also in peace, in the theatre of hostilities and elsewhere. "When given for heroism it is equivalent to the Distinguished Service Cross of the Army; when given for other services it is a junior service medal, and there is no corresponding decoration in the Army now that the Certificate of Merit has been abolished."

It seems to the writer that the distinction thus given in the Navy Cross is unfortunate and tends to detract from its value. Six thousand and thirty-two Distinguished Service Crosses have been issued in the Army during and since the World War. About one-third of these are posthumous. One hundred eleven oak leaf clusters have been awarded, fifty-two of these to the air service. In the Navy, five hundred seven Crosses have been issued. There is also a Citation Star which has been adopted and applies to every officer and enlisted man who is cited for "gallantry in action" by a general officer, under conditions not warranting the award of a Medal of Honor or a Distinguished Service Cross. The soldier who is subject to such an order is entitled to wear a silver star three-sixteenths of an inch in diameter, on a ribbon of a medal of the campaign in which the citation was given." No other nation has a similar decoration, it being distinctly American and instituted by Act of Congress in July, 1918."

The Victory medal adopted by agreement between this nation and its Allies during the World War is issued to all officers and men of our Army and Navy who took part in that war, between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, whose service has been honorable.

The Victory button, or lapel button, is issued to all officers and enlisted men, field clerks, and members of the Army Nurse Corps, who served as above. The button is silver for those wounded in action and bronze for all others.

This paper does not refer, for obvious reasons, to the various campaign and war medals distributed to all officers and men who took part in the Civil War, Indian Wars, Spanish, Philippine and World Wars. There is one medal, however, termed the "Congressional Philippine Medal," which should be noticed. It was authorized by a special Act of Congress to reward the officers and men who volunteered for the Spanish-American War, and after the treaty of peace was made with Spain, these soldiers were entitled to be discharged; but the Philippine Insurrection broke out and they volunteered to remain for its suppression. This medal was authorized as a tribute to the patriotism and loyalty of these men.

The various medals and buttons issued by different veteran organizations, such as the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, the Grand Army of the Republic, and the American Legion, and numerous others, are not authorized by the Government and have no place in this paper.

Through the courtesy of the Adjutant General's office the writer has been able to obtain a complete list of living Medal of Honor men on the rolls of the Department up to December 11, 1921. This shows that at that time there were 365 living Medal of Honor men on the rolls, including the World War list. One hundred and eighty-two of these are on the special pension roll and are, therefore, beyond 65 years of age.

Who was the Unknown Soldier? In a way it matters little now, for in a larger sense he typifies the integrity and intrepidity of the American soldier of all wars. His memorial is an unseen one, the history of his deeds mostly unwritten, but even more important than visible monument or written archives his achievements live forever in the hearts of his grateful countrymen. In memory of our departed members and comrades, Dr. Orlando H. Petty, National Commander, has in an address at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier paid one of the finest tributes to the American Soldier that has ever been delivered. His address was as follows:

WE are assembled here to pay tribute to the Unknown Soldier. Yet to me it seems impossible for anyone to choose words and arrange them in sentences that would be a fitting tribute to a volunteer who has made the supreme sacrifice. All I shall attempt is to emphasize a few of the thoughts that I think our hero, the spirit of America, must have thought.

He may have volunteered from any one of millions of American homes. War Mothers whose beloved sons have not been identified may well take comfort and solace in the possibility that this representative body of physicians of our great Nation bows in reverential tribute over the sacred body of her own precious boy who died for his fellowman in the service of his own country. "Greater love than this hath no man."

The tomb of the Unknown Soldier cannot be designated as a mere sepulchre. It will always be venerated as a sacred shrine; a shrine emblematic of the supreme sacrifice contributed by the noble youth of our beloved Nation on the shell-swept and gas-poisoned battlefields of the Great War.

Unknown Soldier, we reverently place this wreath upon your tomb, regarding you as our compass, our guiding star in the duties of citizenship. Unknown before the Great War, and I say it respectfully, unknown because during your life prior to the war you were not privileged to be subjected to the acid test that purifies the souls of real men and makes them the standards of citizenship, in the civilized world. Your true worth was unknown perhaps to all save to her from whom you inherited your convictions of the superman, but surely known to her, your mother, who also taught you righteousness and thrilled you with the zeal for service to your Country and your God. Unknown because you thought not of self but only of obedience to our Nation's laws and duty to mankind. Unknown only in name for you were always known as the highest type of the world's best men who respond at once to the call for help from humanity, and are ever ready to make any sacrifice yes, willing, if need be, to answer the last muster whenever our Commander, The Great Physician calls.

Yours was a soul that thought only of service, a soul that feared no one but God.

Our duty is plain, we must think the thoughts and live the ideals of the Unknown Soldier, thus making this world better and worth the price our fallen heroes paid for it.

The Convention of 1925-1926

THE convention of 1925 held at Pittsburgh, Pa., on November, 10th, 11th and 12th, and the convention of 1926 held at Pittsburgh, Pa., on October 4th to 9th, of the Legion of Valor of the United States of America were memorable and momentous and marked definite milestones in the history of this order. It brought to the attention of many people who hitherto were not informed of the existence of this order the fact that its membership was composed of men and women who had performed deeds of valor on the field of battle that were probably unequaled in modern warfare. The people of both Pittsburgh and Philadelphia recognizing this fact left nothing undone to make the stay of the delegates within their gates both pleasant and profitable.

The convention at Pittsburgh brought forth many new ideas, the most important of which was that the past was mostly a memory of duty to our common country well performed, but more important still that the duty of the organization and of its individual members was not completed, and that they must push onward and upward as citizens towards a still loftier and higher goal—that of the protection and preservation of all that is great and good and noble in our heritage of this great Republic. Armistice Day was surely an inspiration to all of those who witnessed the wonderful parade and reunion of such organizations as the 28th Division A.E.F.; the 111th Infantry, 28th Division, A.E.F.; the Army Nurses Corps; the Veterans of the Spanish-American War; the Veterans of Foreign Wars and of the American Legion and of many other organizations which those who were fortunate enough to be there will never forget. By common consent, the members of the Legion of Valor and of the Ladies' Auxiliary were accorded the honor of reviewing the entire parade from the reviewing stand. No one can ever forget the splendid appearance of the men who seven years before had answered the call of their country to engage in the greatest war of all history, and the tribute that they paid to those that they left "over seas" on the battlefields of France and Germany. Inspiration was gained by every one who had the privilege of meeting such men as General Godfrey who has distinguished himself in the Civil and Indian Wars and who is still alive and active at the age of eighty-five years and of such men as Schoonmaker, Woodside, Cain, Stiff, Prager, Petty, Edwards, Nicholas Fox and of many others too numerous to mention, and of that noble body of women the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Legion of Valor.

The ideas that were born in Pittsburgh had grown greatly during the year that elapsed, and it was to be expected that something very definite would be worked out at the Philadelphia convention, and our expectations were realized. The public officials under the leadership of His Honor Mayor W. Freeland Kendrick and the citizens of Philadelphia welcomed the organization and left nothing undone to show their appreciation of our presence in the city. Although Mayor Kendrick could not have been busier with local affairs, he gave freely of his time and of the members of his staff during the entire period. He gave the organization a dinner, made an address to them in Independence Hall where the Declaration was signed, and gave one whole evening at the annual banquet where he delivered an address such as probably was never equaled or excelled. Many places of interest were visited, including a half day at Valley Forge and one-half day was spent at Fort Wayne where the United States Army recognized the kinship of the organization by putting on the most complete review of the armed forces of the United States that has ever been held.

At this convention new ideals were adopted and the whole tone of the convention was such as to inspire the entire membership with a new sense of duty as former members of the armed forces of the United States and with a present and future duty as every day citizens. This was especially worthy of note, after the members had heard the addresses that were delivered by Mayor Kendrick, General Harbord and others at the annual banquet, and after the proceedings and adjournment of the convention. Especially notable is the fact that many soldiers of note whose names have been prominent in our wars of the past sixty years and some whose names are known not only in our own country, but in many foreign countries have deemed it a privilege to have become members or companions of the Legion of Valor of the United States of America.

It is hoped that all of those who have been decorated by our government with either the Congressional Medal of Honor or the Distinguished Service Cross shall ultimately become members of this order. We should not let any false pride or perverted ideas of decorations prevent us from becoming associated with this organization of men and women. We should remember that however humble our station that by association with others we can enable ourselves to do great good and maybe prove an inspiration to others that they may follow in the footsteps of those who have gone before.

"Lives of great men all remind us	Footprints, that perhaps another
We should make our lives sublime	Sailing o'er life's solemn main,
And when parting leave behind us	A forlorn and shipwrecked brother
Footprints on the sands of time.	Seeing, shall take heart again.

Let us, then, be up and doing
With a heart for any fate;
Still achieving, still pursuing
Learn to labor and to wait."
